

The Southern Congressman Speaks (Words and Music Kurt E Hoffman ©2011)

There are times when everyone is certain to be wrong.
And they are to get confused and maybe need to just take a little breath.
And maybe we can all bite our tongues, and make it so we all need to count to ten.
Quite often it's just those trivial things, trivial things we often get riled about.

And then there's all, those other times, we think that we have maybe made a point.
But then, there may be those other ones, you swear that there are no ears to fall upon.
So maybe we can all just whisper, whisper, and act through major tolerance.
Show us all your patience, so that we can live to see another dawn.

Well can't we all just get along?
Can we all let down our pride? Can we forget what's been said?
Can we let down our pride, and just look em' in the eyes?
Make up some like big ol' fake smile, and shake your head; that's always a big surprise.
